Law Enforcement Intelligence and Analysis Masters Program

About the Program

This course of study was designed to meet the needs of the nation's federal, tribal, state, and local policing agencies as well as private sector security officials.

The School of Criminal Justice expects this applied degree to be pursued by intelligence analysts, law enforcement and security professionals, and prospective analysts, seeking scholarship and advanced training in the emerging field of intelligence analysis.

The program is taught entirely online. A number of support services are available to assist students as they progress through the program, and the School is able to accommodate the busy schedules of practitioners worldwide by bringing the classroom to the student.

MSU faculty oversee the curriculum; instruction is provided by MSU faculty along with part-time instructors who are law enforcement professionals.
